

It is an absurd notion that any reason could possibly exist to disallow XM radio from broadcasting local traffic and weather information... Just because a new and better broadcast provider is now active, does not mean that your organization has a right to prevent it from exercising its first amendment rights.

XM Radio has been a wonderful new source of entertainment and information in my life for the last year I've been subscribed. Every month is more than worth its ten dollars with the vast amount of, well... everything the service provides. Taking away its capability to broadcast local weather and traffic would simply inconvenience users, as well as bring them against you and the NAB, while forcing them to use your drab national stations as alternate sources. If they want to be freed from the mediocre mainstream radio, they should be completely allowed to do so.

Angrily,
Alex Gravlin
